

Giuseppe Motta is currently Associate Professor in History of International Relations at the Department of Modern Literature and Culture of Sapienza University of Rome. He also has been enabled as Full Professor in History of International Relations in 2020 and collaborates with numerous reviews and research centers such as The Historical Review of the Institute of History of Belgrade, the journal Archivi e Documenti, or the Institute for Italo-Romanian Studies of Cluj-Napoca (Romania). Prof. Motta has issued numerous publications about the history of Eastern Europe and of ethnic and national minorities in particular. Among his Publications, The Great War against Eastern European Jewry 1914-1920. Cambridge Scholars Publishing 2017; La Diaspora Australiana degli ebrei dell'Europa centro-orientale, 1918-38, NuovaCultura 2016; The Legacy of the First World War. The Minority Question in Transylvania, Petru Maior Publishing House 2015; Less than Nations. Central-Eastern European Minorities after WW1, Cambridge Scholars Publishing 2013; Le minoranze nel XX secolo. Dallo Stato nazionale all'integrazione europea, FrancoAngeli 2016.